SCENE IN THE GEORGIA CAPITAL.—An Eastern correspondent gives the following account of the occupation of Milledgeville and some scenes in which the Union boys participated:

Major-General Slocum, the well tried commander of the left wing, accompanied the corps, which moved on a better road than that traveled by Davis, and reached the city one day in advance of him, planting upon the State-house of Georgia the National colors of the One Hundred and fourth New York Regiment, which regiment, with the Third Wisconsin, who fought in the Valley of Virginia under Banks, was detailed as Provost Guard.

These, however, were not the first troops to enter the Capital. The news that "Old Lightning" (which is now applied to Sherman) was coming spread like the wind, and on Saturday Gov. Brown and the Legislature, which was in session, packed up their valises and vamosed the rancho, leaving about one thousand rebel cavalry to cover their retreat to Augusta, where they hoped to find rest for their wearied feet.

The cavalry left the same night, and on Sunday, the 20th, Captain Duncan rushed into town on a "free" cavalry charge, frightening the old granny who occupied the Mayor's chair into a surrender and stampeding all the male population, with a squad of ten men. One rebel lady, whose husband is a high official in the State, and whose family is among the bon ton, described the surrender in the following words:

"Early in the afternoon five Yankee scouts came dashing pell mell into the town, when the men—the mean, craven-hearted wretches, fully two hundred strong—skedaddled, leaving our baby Mayor to go out and surrender the place unconditionally to the five greasy Yankees, ten miles miles in advance of the army. Oh, the men are mean, chicken-hearted wretches, and the Mayor a puffed-up old fool. Had I been in town, I'd collected all the women and driven the skunks out with mop-handles and broomsticks."

This is the whole story in a nutshell. The craven-hearted bipeds of the masculine gender ran away and left their wives to the tender mercies of the Yankees, who, they have time and again asserted, came here to ravish, burn and plunder indiscriminately.

The rebel Capital is a very pretty little city, capable of accommodating over five thousand inhabitants. It is situated upon the Oconee river, upon commanding ground, in the heart of a rich and productive agricultural district in Baldwin county. The residences are nearly all splendid structures, the surroundings of which show the owners to have been people of a high degree of taste and refinement. The gardens of the more wealthy are beautifully laid out; the lawns spacious and beautiful, and the streets clean and well-proportioned. In the centre of the town is the Capitol building, a large brown stone building, of modern style of architecture, situated in the centre of a ten-acre square, upon the corners of which, and inside the fence that surrounds the whole, are small but neatly furnished churches. Outside and adjacent to the Capitol grounds are the arsenal and magazine, both very good buildings for the purpose for which they are used. These, the Governor's mansion and the Milledgeville Hotel are the chief public buildings of the city. The Penitentiary is an institution now unknown, as it was laid in ashes the night the Twentieth Corps entered the city.

The rebels on evacuating the place released all the Union men confined in the prison, and conscripted them into the rebel army.

The State-house, when I visited it, presented an appearance of devastation and chaos. The troops bers and the offices attached, and tore up the furniture, scattered the contents of the drawers about the floor, destroyed the State papers left behind by Governor Brown and his associates in their hurried flight, appropriating to their own use everything they could carry, cut the trimmings from the windows, and revelled in broad sheets of unsigned State bonds and currency, several millions of which were found piled up in one of the rooms, as well as the plates from which they had been struck.

As I strolled leisurely through the chambers and Committee rooms, and gazed upon the hundreds of negroes who filled the Capitol and reveled in its halls, I could not but feel that it was no desecration—that it was fitting that a council hall where the treasonable ordinance of secession was hatched and given form should be spit upon and insulted by conquering troops and insulted by conquering troops and disenthralled darkies, under the very shadows of the lifelike portraits of Georgia's chivalrous sons that adorned the walls of both chambers. It is only a matter of surprise that General Sherman, on evacuating that city, did not lay the building in ashes.

On the day that the Fourteenth Corps triumphantly marched into the Capital to the music of the Union, the officers of the 20th Corps, to the number of about one hundred, assembled at the Senate chamber, called the roll of the House, appointed a Speaker and Clerks, and opened the Legislature with prayer, the facetious Chaplain praying for the overthrow of the rebel Government, the return of Georgia to the Union, fine weather and little fighting on our march to the coast, concluded with the remark, "All of which is respectfully submitted."

A lobby member very gravely arose in the gallery, and asked if this honorable body would hear from the gallery.

Half an hour's discussion followed, and, on a division, it was decided that the gallery should be heard.

Rising with all the dignity and polish of a Chesterfield, he quietly put his hand in a side pocket, drew out a flask, placed it to his lips, replaced it in his pocket, and afterwards resumed his seat.

The Speaker—I must rise to a point of order. I believe it is always customary to treat the Speaker.

Lobby Member—I beg the pardon of the honorable House for my thoughtlessness. I believe it is customary to treat the Speaker.

Here he produced the flask, and proceeded: "Yes, I beg to inform the House that I shall treat the Speaker—respectfully."

The flask dropped into his pocket and he into his seat, amid cheers from the gallery and smiles from the honorable Speaker's colleagues.

After the organization of the Legislature, the question of reconstructing the State was taken up and discussed for some hours, with all the gravity conceivable, by the Yankee representatives from the various counties. The result of the deliberations was that the State was let back like a conquered child into the Union, and a Committee appointed to kick Governor Brown and President Davis' sites, which Committee retired, and soon after returned and reported that they were animated by a progressive spirit, but that the articles upon which they were to exercise their "pedal extremities" were non est.

The Legislature adjourned after the style of Governor Brown's Legislature of the previous Friday—by taking a square drink and a handful of "hognuts."

A letter from General Sherman, received in Washington, treats incidentally of our Administration, of the war, and the prospects of the rebellion, and closes with a sentence that clangs on manly ears with the ring of a Viking's sword leaping from its scabbard:

"My idea is that every young and middle-aged man ought to be proud of the chances to fight for the integrity of his country. I would like to see all trade and commerce absolutely cease until this conflict is over: and all who can fight, and won't fight, ought to be killed or banished; and those who won't support those who do fight should be denationalized."

The singular epithets of "bears" and "bulls" were first applied to speculators on the London Exchange about 1834. When two parties contract; the one to deliver and the other to take stocks on a future day at a specified price, it is the interest of the delivering party, in the intervening period, to depress stocks, and of the receiving party to raise them. The former is styled a "bear," in allusion to the habit of that animal to pull down things with his paws, and the latter a "bull," from the custom of that beast to throw an object up with his horns.

The movements of the Corn Exchange in Philadelphia for the appointment of Colonel John W. Forney to a place in the Cabinet, will be vigorously seconded by leading politicians, who urge it as the best way of harmonizing and adjusting the war of the Curtin and Cameron factions in Pennsylvania.

MONDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 6, 1865.

Is it an Age of Barbarism?

Our readers will bear us witness that we have cultivated no rancorous spirit of hate towards the Southern States and people, and have not striven to inculcate in their minds a belief that the war was prosecuted on their part with inhuman barbarity. Many times we have left unnoticed tales that came in our exchanges for we were unwilling to believe them to be true, and we hesitated to publish to the world accounts that might possibly be exaggerated, and the telling of which would tend to build up a spirit at variance with the unity we look for and expect at no distant day. To-day we publish extracts from a letter received by a friend from his brother, a soldier in the armies with which Grant beleaguers Richmond and Petersburg, not in any sense written or intended for publication, and stating in the free style of correspondence between brothers facts that we believe and draw our conclusions from as the statements are in unison with many that come from other sources.

War is barbarous at the best. Its stern realities consisting of death, destruction and desolation—exposing as they do the mother and her babes to death dealing missiles—the destruction of cities and the invasion of peaceful lands by hostile foes—all make the friend of humanity shudder, and the stoutest heart to shrink from the responsibility of its commencement. But there are amenities to warfare, not as practiced among savages, where the scalps of unoffending women and children are taken and kept as trophies, but among the civilized nations that cultivate the arts of peace, though sometimes forced to war. It is recognized in the code of nations that a soldier is only a foe when he is in arms, and that as a captive he is entitled to all the care he can receive, consistent with his safe keeping. Guerillas are not recognized as legitimate foes, and what is known as "bushwhacking" is discountenanced as barbarous. The South fights for independence—slavery desires to be free from the restraint that moral sentiment imposes upon it and now rebels with the determination to triumph and become released from the bonds of the Federal Union, or perish in the attempt. The barbarous spirit that slavery inculcates everywhere, and the cruel appetite that is bred where it prevails, makes the present war on the part of the South not merely a reckless display of the most astonishing bravery on the part of the Southerners themselves but engrafts upon their natures a brutal ferocity bred by the inexorable hate that barbarism manifests for all that conflicts with it.

Does any reasonable mind believe that when Lee marched through to Gettysburg, his captured stragglers were inhumanly butchered by the [illegible] from Southern sources ever stated that Confederate prisoners in our hands have ever suffered as Federal prisoners do in theirs? Has anything occurred to rival the Lawrence massacre, the St Albans' raid, or the incendiary attempts upon Northern cities? No. There are undoubtedly many miscreants with the Union armies that cannot be restrained from committing depredations upon the weak and defenceless, but there is no general system of such horrid and indiscriminate slaughter as too often prevails with our enemies. True that many Southern soldiers have better traits, and that these charges are not applicable to all, but the general character that this institution of slavery has left upon a people manifests itself in the fierce hate which is cultivated and displayed by the adherents of slavery towards all that oppose its ends, and bloody as the fields of the Old Dominion have become in these years of war the tens of thousands who have fallen in open, manly fight are not as significant of the character of the strife as is the fact that the very guards that Warren placed over homes that he sought to leave free from war's desolations as he passed them were found murdered, butchered, massacred on his return.

The soldier unwittingly gives to us a graphic picture of his chief, as he stands long gazing in silence at the disfigured corpse of one of his "boys," and then calls his officers around to order them to burn and destroy for vengeance. It was a bloody track the army left going home; but if the retribution was fearful, the Southern people must remember that retaliation is the stern rule by which barbarism is checked in times of war. It would be pleasant to know that Warren marched without harming homes, and left behind him the peace and quiet he found, as he intended, but the judgment was called down upon themselves.

NEWS FROM IDAHO.—We see accounts in the Boise papers of a vigilance committee in the Payette valley that are disposed to give certain persons of very suspicious character notice to quit. Trouble was brewing.

Hay was selling January 7th at Boise City, at $60 per ton, and scarce at that. The winter had proved unusually severe.

A Variety Troupe was about to commence amusing the citizens of the Capital of Idaho.

Bev. Porter, who escaped from Walla Walla, is said to have gone through Boise, bound for Salt Lake.

SCISSORS.—A committee of half a dozen printers from the Herald office invaded the sanctum yesterday and formally presented us with a pair of editorial clippers of really formidable proportions. Said they: "In view of the proposed enlargement of the DAILY we tender these, that the scissors department may be also enlarged." We received them affectionately. The world all knows that an editor's power and privilege is to wield them and we will try to wield them well and [illegible] them [illegible] every spicy paragraph we see and will [illegible] to do it.

WASCO QUOTA.—Capt. Borland favored us with a call yesterday and tells us that his company from Wasco county (including what is now Grant) has reached the minimum standard and is ready to be mustered in.

LANE COUNTY QUOTA.—A friend writes us that Lane county has raised its quota of the infantry regiment and one over. Good for Lane.

We have hitherto been accustomed to look with respect upon the decisions of British Courts, but we have now been taught the scandalous lesson that such Courts may, instead of vindicating great principles, [illegible] under [illegible]. Judge Coursol has decided that Rebel desperadoes may pillage American towns, not only with the consent of, but under the actual shield of British law.—[illegible] Journal.

Tom Thumb and lady are starring it in Paris after having astonished London. The lady correspondent of the Bulletin at Paris called on them by invitation, and had the pleasure of seeing the baby, who is said to be a beauty. The description she gives of the petite family, baby and all, is quite interesting.

Our poor fellows suffered everything but death from the severeness of the weather. We were gone six days, and it either rained or snowed every day or night of that time. Part of the time our clothing was coated with ice while wearing them. A great many of the men were compelled to throw away overcoats, woolen blankets and shelter tents on account of their being so wet and heavy. We never put up tents while we were gone. What sleep we got was by lying on the cold ground, with no shelter over us.

My duties are very light; all I have to do is to keep an account of all tools issued and returned. I have the Second and part of the Sixth Corps tools, and am allowed as many men as I want to handle and take care of them. We have just got a tool depot built to store them in, put up in [illegible] house style and covered with tarpaulins. When an order comes for tools, I have them loaded up and send a man with them.

I wish you could visit me in my tent home. I think I have the neatest little cotton covered hotel in the land of Dixie, and if you will make me a call I will treat you to every dainty furnished me by my respected Uncle Samuel, such as hard tack, [illegible] pork and coffee. Rather an extensive bill of fare is it not?

Brother, in speaking of our fare I will say this much for our Government: its armies are as well fed and clothed as any army can be by any nation on this globe. Our food is coarse it is true, but it is wholesome and there is plenty of it.

You can bet I have had some mighty narrow escapes but I am in navigable order yet and hope I shall be during the remainder of my time of service. I have never yet had reason to regret being a soldier. When I enlisted I thought it was my duty; I think so still. After this war is over, if I live, I shall be proud to say that I was a member of the 50th New York.

Oh! I came near forgetting to tell you that we lost two men from my company, while on the raid. The poor fellows gave out on the march [illegible] fate, but I presume they did not suffer long before the guerillas put them out of their misery. Such things are hard to think of, but they are of common occurrence in the army. But you can believe the whole command was kept well closed up coming home, for well the men knew the dread penalty of straggling—it was sure death to be left behind.

It is now midnight and I have only a half inch of sperm to light me to my soft and downy couch of pine poles and army blankets, so I will close by bidding you a kind good-night. [illegible] from your affectionate brother,

MART MORGAN.

WILLAMETTE THEATRE.—The attractive drama of "The Colleen Bawn" was played at Willamette Theatre last evening with great effect and was witnessed by a large and fashionable audience. The play was put upon the stage in fine style, with new and appropriate scenery, the mechanical effects of which were truly impressive. [illegible] The performance throughout the whole of the play [illegible] we have not the space for such a review of the play as we should wish. "The Colleen Bawn" has never been [illegible] received with applause, which every [illegible] Mr Waldron as Danny Mann was the right man for the part, which was happily attested. Miss Douglas performed the part [illegible] with becoming grace and a manner quite deserving. The great play of "The Marble Heart" will be produced this evening, and "The Colleen Bawn" will be given again to-morrow evening.

APPLES.—The steamship took a quantity of apples on her trip to Victoria and San Francisco on Saturday which was nearly equal to the shipment of any steamer for two months previous. The great bulk of this portion of her cargo were forwarded by Messrs. A. D. Shelby & Co., who have won quite a favorable reputation in the business of fruit dealings, for the ensuing drawing to a close. The only vessels upon which apples have been shipped were steam crafts and there is found to be a greater margin for profit in the last year's crop than for some years previous, which is mainly due to good management. The principal market for our fruit has been San Francisco, although the article has been dealt in to some extent at Victoria. A part of the present shipment is consigned to parties in Victoria. The Colonist [illegible] speaks of some choice varieties received at the Sandwich Islands by the bark Cambridge, and says "The Oregon [illegible] variety are among the best flavored we have ever tasted." There are still some apples coming in for export, but the busy part of the season is past, and we may estimate the value of the total shipments at $100,000, with safety.

FOR ESMERALDA.—The steamer Wilson G. Hunt this morning carries Dr. S. B. Farnham, Superintendent of the New York and Idaho gold and silver mining company, and Mr. John A. Carr, the contractor who is to deliver the Company's mill at South Boise on their way to Esmeralda. The machinery was received from the East too late to be forwarded before the close of navigation on the Columbia, and as a consequence it has been found at Celilo, unable to proceed any further. Teams will take the heavy part of the machinery from Celilo, and go on in order that it may be taken over the mountains before the worst roads of Spring, unless there should be a favorable prospect of the river opening to Umatilla within a week. It will be a pretty cold transaction, but the Doctor is a warm-hearted man, an energetic man, and withal a bon vivant with whom we should feel "quite at home" even on the summit of the Blue Mountains of a frosty night. Mr James Schram, for years a resident of this city, will also accompany them to Esmeralda.

RECORDER'S COURT—INSANE.—On Saturday in Recorder's Court John Bull and Mathieu Keith were arraigned for drunken and disorderly conduct and each committed to jail for the term of two days. This man Keith was arrested for running furiously through the streets brandishing an axe. He is very evidently not a sane person, for the last three years he has cost the tax payers more than would keep him in the Asylum, and steps should be taken to place him there. To prevent him from committing some desperate act the officers frequently are obliged to lock him up, and turn him loose again. The proper charge to prefer against him is that of "Insanity," and it would be productive of the greatest good.

THE BEGGING BUSINESS.—A practice is becoming quite prevalent for persons who are out of employment in this city, to approach a stranger in solicitation of alms. We will not pretend to say there are not cases of actual want—the poor are in every community, to a certain extent—and in Portland, very likely, according to her population as much as at any other place. Persons who give should be assured that they are not cheated, by the act of misplaced confidence. A gentleman of our acquaintance gave a man money to purchase a meal of victuals with on Saturday evening, but instead of that the subject bought whisky and did not better his condition in life, by the substitute. We are of the opinion that no man, in the enjoyment of health need beg for a living, in this State at the present time.

THE QUICKEST TRIP ON RECORD.—The clipper ship Sam Merritt, Capt. Wiggin, now laying at Couch's wharf in this city, has just made the quickest trip on record for a bark, from San Francisco [illegible] steamship requires two and a half to three days for the passage, and we note the fact to record that this vessel has nearly beaten their time. [illegible] Sam Merritt leaves San Francisco one day in advance of the steamer, [illegible] becalmed thirty-six hours on the passage, yet she sails in over the Columbia Bar, within an hour of the steamer. She has made decidedly the quickest trip of the fleet.

FUNERAL NOTICE.—The remains of Almira J. Holman, daughter of Mr. J. H. Holman, who died [illegible] Alameda, California, on the 17th day of May 1864, [illegible] arrived on the [illegible] of Captain John Wiggin of the bark Sam Merritt, on yesterday. The funeral services will take place at the First Presbyterian Church, corner of [illegible] and Washington streets, in this city, to-morrow at two o'clock. The friends of the family are invited to attend.

STATE BOUNTY.—Hon. E. N. Cooke, State Treasurer, passed through the city on Saturday [illegible] for Vancouver [illegible]

[illegible]

ACCIDENT.—Mr. [illegible] broke his arm on Wednesday last by being thrown from a load of hay while driving his team on the road about four miles west of the city. The fractured member was properly dressed by a surgeon soon after the occurrence, and the man is doing very well.

[illegible]

One of the triumphs of American science is the [illegible] Alvan Clark [illegible] of Chicago University [illegible] The cost of the instrument is $18,187. Its weight is a ton [illegible] The length of the great tube is twenty-two feet. [illegible] The cost of the observatory was $25,000.

SOUND DOCTRINE.—The Marysville Appeal holds the following language: [illegible] the war must come of [illegible] complete triumph of the Federal arms and the subjugation of the rebels.

THE MINES.—From every mining camp in Southern Oregon comes cheering golden news. Water is abundant, and all hands are at work. [illegible] this winter at least five dollars per day to the man. There are at the present time, [illegible] Chinamen and Kanakas from five to [illegible] hundred men employed in the mines of this county. [illegible] The flood did the miners much injury in carrying away flumes and reservoirs, but there was a compensation attending that injury. [illegible] channels cleaned out to the bedrock. [illegible] the early energetic and honest miner.—Sentinel.

Five hundred and twenty bales of cotton and a large amount of tobacco with other goods constituting the cargo of the captured blockade runner Annie were sold recently under the direction of United States Marshal Murray, in Brooklyn, New York. The cotton in good condition brought prices ranging from $1.21 to $1.25 a pound and the tobacco of all grades brought 43 to 60 cents a pound. The vessel was taken by the Government at a valuation of $65,000. The amount realized for the cargo alone reached nearly $500,000.

Mrs Douglas, the widow of Senator Douglas, is living in quiet retirement with her mother, Mrs Cutts, in the old homestead near the capitol building. Her brother, Captain Cutts, who was wounded in one of the battles in Virginia last summer, has not yet recovered, and is receiving every possible care at her hands. Mrs Douglas says little about politics, but her sympathies are said to be strongly enlisted in the Federal cause.

Invigorate the System.

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters

[illegible] nerves, muscle and fibre [illegible] healthful play.

Strengthen the System.

The best means of imparting vigor to the broken down frame and shattered constitution which has yet been invented or discovered is proffered to the feeble of both sexes and all ages in

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Debility, from whatever cause arising, may be cured; strength, in whatever manner it may have been wasted, may be restored by the use of this powerful and healthy invigorant. For indigestion and all its painful effects, bodily and mental, they are a positive specific.

A Word to the Aged!

In the decline of life, the loss of vital force consequent upon physical decay can only be safely supplied by some vivifying preparation which recruits the strength and spirits without entailing the exhaustion which is always the final effect of ordinary stimulants. We tender to the aged

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

As an invigorant and restorative, immediate in its beneficial action and permanent in its effects. It tones the stomach, improves the appetite, and acts like a charm upon the spirits.

For Females:

Thousands of ladies resort to it as a remedy for hysteria, fluttering of the heart, nervous headache, vertigo, general debility, and all peculiar disturbances and derangements to which, as a sex, they are subject. It cheers and enlivens the depressed mental powers, as well as strengthens the body, and its use is never followed by any reaction.

Cure Your Cold, Save Your Lungs.

NEWELL'S

PULMONARY SYRUP

HAS

CURED THOUSANDS!

And it will Cure You!

"A Cough is generally the effect of a Cold, which has either been improperly treated or entirely neglected. When it proves obstinate there is Always reason to fear the consequences,

as this shows a weak state of the lungs, and is often the forerunner of Consumption."—[Buchanan's Domestic Medicine.

STOP THAT COUGHING!

Some of you can't, and we pity you. You have tried every remedy but the one destined, by its intrinsic merit, to supercede all similar preparations. It is not surprising you should be reluctant to try something else after the many experiments you have made of trashy compounds foisted on the public as a certain cure, but

Pulmonary Syrup!

Is really the VERY BEST remedy ever compounded for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and Consumption. Thousands of people in California and Oregon have been already benefited by its surprising curative powers.

WHAT KILLED HIM?

Dr. Hall, in his "Journal of Health," speaking of the death of Washington Irving, asks the above question, and adds: "He might have remained with us for some years to come, had it not been for advice, kindly intended, no doubt, but given in thoughtlessness and reckless ignorance.

He Had a Cold!

Which, by some injudicious prescription, had been converted into asthma." Let me say to Dr. Hall that that "prescription" was not

NEWELL'S

SYRUP.

KEEP IT IN THE HOUSE, use it freely, give it to your children upon the slightest indications of a Cold, and you will think and speak of it as all do who have become acquainted with its merits.

A Greenback Case!

H AVING BEEN COMPELLED TO ACCEPT OF Legal Tender Notes at par since the 17th day of December 1862, for the rent of my handsome Brick Store, corner of Morrison and Front streets, I feel compelled to announce for the benefit of the public at large that

Jacob Mayer

Leased the building of me on the 17th day of February, 1862, for a term of years, at which time there was no such currency in vogue, and it was understood the terms were CASH. Since the date above stated I have received the depreciated currency regularly, under protest for the rent of the

CITY OF PARIS STORE,

Making less than two fifths of the real amount said Mayer was to pay. He had secured the building at very advantageous rates, and even were he now to comply with his contract and pay in COIN, would be getting the best bargain in the city. I make this statement to show the public what kind of a man he must be to take such undue advantage of the times to convert a few dollars to himself by LEGAL SWINDLING. The public can readily see what it costs to have such tenants.

I [illegible] may meet again,
She has been worse than foe to me;
And yet, if we should meet again
I should [illegible] to my bane.

She has been worse than foe to me,
With promised love and present pain,
Till [illegible] seemed only injury,
And truth was known to be in vain:
I did believe her to my bane.

Her clear eyes looked [illegible] lovingly,
She clung with such a hearty strain,
Her lips—so sweet, so sweet to me—
Left upon mine a poison blain:
I did believe her to my bane.

She has been worse than foe to me;
Yet I should love her o'er again
If we should meet—dear Injury!
Men call her Hope—but she is Pain,
Pray [illegible] we may not meet again!

A Game at Cards.

Major Sprott was an inveterate gamester. Il jouait gros jeu. The highest stakes were powerless to make him flinch. There were, as I have hinted, public gaming tables at Aix la Chapelle in those days, and the Major looked in for two or three hours every afternoon at Kursaal. As a rule although a careless player, he won largely; one night he carried away 2000 Napoleons; on another he [illegible] the bank, which was limited to 5000. But it was observed he never approached the roulette table, addicting himself always to the rouge et noir or trente et quarante—a game which, as you should know, is played with cards, and in no way depends upon the treacherous evolutions of an ivory ball.

After all, these attendances at the Kursaal were only pour se destrairie. It was in private that Major Sprott made his largest gains. At lansquenet, at picquet, at ecarte, at whist, at vingt et un, he was unconquerable. He always won, and that, too, by seeming the most indifferent player. At loo he is said to have amassed enormous sums. It was impossible to bring against him the slightest accusation of foul play, but at last the grand dukes and embassadors whose pockets he emptied began to look with some uneasiness upon the terrible American. He didn't play on a system, he scarcely looked at his cards, and yet he always won.

There was at this time at Aix a dashing adventurer, of Irish extraction, whose real name is believed to have been O'Kelly, but who called himself the Baron de Kolli. He had been mixed up in the mysterious and disreputable intrigue by means of which the British government endeavored, but unsuccessfully, to release Ferdinand of Spain (the Virgin's petticoat embroiderer) from the clutches of Napoleon at Bayonne. The Baron de Kolli had come to Aix on the chance of something turning up in the way of adventure or of swindling, and lived from hand to mouth like a high mettled gamester as he was. He could not obtain admission to the patrician society in which Major Sprott was a welcome guest, but the Kursaal was open to everybody who had a decent coat on his back, and to the Kursaal, and to the trente et quarante table, the baron de Kolli came in the afternoon, playing a little when the odds were favorable, but occupying himself much more with watching the game of the man with the tortoise shell spectacles.

It chanced one day that, as Major Sprott was bending across the green baize to stake a handful of Napoleons on the rouge, one of the strings which, beside the tortoise shell, confined the spectacles to his head, became loosened, and those appendages slid off his nose and fell on the floor. He stooped rapidly to pick them up; but the Baron de Kolli had been beforehand with him. He had placed the heel of one of his Hessian boots on the glasses, and crushed them into a hundred fragments.

Major Sprott (he had won the stake by the way) looking extremely disconcerted, and turned towards the Irishman, as if for an apology; but the latter coolly whispered:

"I did it on purpose. You may pick up the pieces and put them in your pocket, if you like; I think I've spoil't your little game, my darling."

Major Sprott angrily shrugged his shoulders, muttered something about an "awkward boor," and pocketing his winnings, turned to leave the room, when the Baron de Kolli laid his hand on his wrist.

"You'll just go on playing, my jewel," he whispered—"just for one little hour. I want to see how you'll get on without those cat back barnacles of yours. If you don't I declare that I'll pick a quarrel with you, and blow your brains out before sunrise to-morrow."

The Baron de Kolli looked as though he could be as good as his word, and the major went on playing without his tortoise shell spectacles. He staked low, till the Baron whispered to him that, unless he put on the Napoleons a little faster, he should be compelled to carry out his promise. At the end of half an hour, Major Sprott had lost eight hundred Napoleons.

"And now," he said familiarly, taking the major's arm, "we'll just stroll to the roulette room, and see what they are doing there."

"Tush! I dont want to be ruined," quoth Major Sprott; "I play to win, and not to lose, Baron. Here, come this way; and we'll settle this little matter outside."

They walked into the garden of the Kursaal; and when they had reached a secluded nook, the American said:

"I suppose you are not overburdened with worldly wealth, Baron?"

"I am as poor," he replied, "as Job, or a jentleman could well be."

"I thought so. Well, you have broken my spectacles, and spoilt, as you say, my little game; and, besides, you have killed the goose that laid the golden eggs. I could easily leave you baffled and uncertain; but I like peace and quietness, and would rather not have a spy watching my movements. Here are five rouleaux, each containing a hundred Napoleons, for you to hold your tongue forty-eight hours, by which time I shall be across the French frontier. Will that do?"

The Baron bowed and protested his eternal gratitude. The major gave him the money which he lost in a fortnight at roulette.

As for Major Sprott, he discharged his bill at the hotel, and, leaving a handsome gratuity for the servants, left Aix the next morning in a post chaise for Belgium. He forgot, however, to bid farewell to the Princess Schoutsikoff and Mademoiselle Catin; and after his departure it was found the rubies and diamonds he had been so liberal a disposer of were all paste.

As for his tortoise shell spectacles and the connection between these apparently harmless aids to the weak sight, that mystery was not cleared up till ten years afterward. In 1825 a man named Gougenheim was tried before the criminal court of assize at Cologne, charged with half-a-dozen acts of swindling and forgery. He made, after conviction, a clean breast of it; and as is usually the case with repentant rogues, volunteered the confession of a great many crimes of which he had never been suspected. It appeared that at the time of the congress of Aix la Chapelle, he had been in a large way of business as manufacturer of playing cards. Thousands of packs of the "Devil's books" were wanted to assist the congress at their deliberations, and Gougenheim made them all. He had been for a long time, and in multifarious transactions in league with the pseudo Major Sprott, a Polish adventurer, who has spent many years at the French galleys. These worthies hit upon a very noble device. On the engraved back of the cards Gougenheim placed certain cabalistic marks, denoting their color and value, quite invisible to the naked eye, but discernable by means of a powerful magnifier. And the tortoise shell spectacles were simply very strong magnifying glasses.—How Kolli ever got an inkling of the fraud was never discovered; but a large fortune had been realised by the tortoise-shell spectacles before the disappearance of Maj. Sprott. Ere he finally levanted, however, he contrived to swindle his confederate of his share of the plunder; and weighing all the pros and cons of the matter, and judging him by a purely human standard, I am inclined to think that Maj. Sprott, or whatever his name was, has every right to be reckoned a great man.

A Poetical Idea Realized—An Enoch Arden in Real Life.—A correspondent of the London Morning Post writes from Brussels as follows:

A circumstance has just occurred here which in some points resembles the events out of which the Poet Laureate has made so much of Enoch Arden. About 20 years ago a blacksmith was condemned to an imprisonment of seven months for a misdeed of which he had been found guilty; and on the expiration of his term of punishment, being unwilling to return to his former employment he enlisted in the Dutch army, and shortly afterwards proceeded to the colonies of Holland, in the East Indies, leaving a wife and young daughter behind him. Five years after a comrade who had served in the same company arrived here and told the wife that her husband had been killed with a poisoned arrow by one of the natives. The comrade and the wife, having soon come to an understanding, were married, and had lived happily together for many years. Their happiness was, however, interrupted a few days ago, when an individual with white locks made his appearance in the family circle, which included seven children. This was the blacksmith who had been supposed to be long dead, who, seeing how matters stood with his wife and friend, made the best he could of the change; and, after having deposited three thousand florins for the use of the daughter he had left behind—who is now twenty-two years of age—he took his departure for London in the steamer Moselle, and has since doubtless safely arrived at his destination, though nobody here seems to have been made acquainted with his future plans or intentions.

On Petticoats.—Elihu Burritt has been making calculations about women's petticoats—queer business for the Learned Blacksmith—and says more than ten thousand tons of steel are put into crinoline in Christendom annually. Upon this the Boston Traveler remarks:

"Such is the magnitude of crinoline, considered from a business point of view, and no wonder that the article takes up so much room in the world. Twenty million pounds of iron worked up yearly into petticoats and carried about by the delicate creatures! It must be a far greater burden than their sins. But they get along very well with it, and thrive under its weight. Iron, according to Solon, is the most potent of all things, conquering even gold's owners, and ladies find it a very useful article in making their conquests. Just now it rules the court, the camp, the grove, and is potential everywhere, from castle to cottage. In every sense this is the age of iron, even women acknowledging the rule of the government of metals, a rule that literally encircles them. Those who would abolish the hoop must see that they have a great interest to contend against, and that all good conservatives are bound to oppose them."

One of Lamb's Best.—Lamb once convulsed a company with an anecdote of Coleridge, which without doubt, he hatched in his hoax-loving brain. "I was," he said "going from my house at Enfield to the East India House one morning when I met Coleridge, on his way to pay me a visit. He was brimful of some new idea, and, in spite of my assuring him that time was precious, he drew me within the gate of an unoccupied garden by the button of my coat, and, closing his eyes, commenced an eloquent discourse, waving his right hand gently as the musical words flowed in an unbroken stream from his lips. I listened entranced; but the striking clock recalled me to a sense of my duty. I saw it was of no use to attempt to break away; so, taking advantage of his absorption in his subject, and with my penknife, quietly severing my button from my coat, I decamped. Five hours afterwards, in passing the same garden, on my way home, I heard Coleridge's voice, and, on looking in, there he was, with closed eyes, the button in his fingers, and the right hand gracefully waving, just as when I left him. He had never missed me."

A veteran relates the following: It once happened that a mule driver was engaged in leading an unruly mule for a short distance, which job proved about as much as he was able to do, and gave full employment for both of his hands. As he was thus engaged, a newly appointed brigadier rode by near him, in all the consequential radiance of his star-light, when the mule driver hailed him, as follows:

"I say, I wish that you would send a couple of men down here to help me to manage this mule."

The brigadier, indignant at being so familiarly addressed, sternly replied:

"Do you know who I am, sir."

"Yes," was the reply; "you are General ——, I believe."

"Then why do you not salute me before addressing me?" inquired the brigadier.

"I will," responded the M. D., "if you will get off and hold the mule."

The brigadier retired in good order.

Promise Making and Breaking.—There are people in the world against whom the inexperienced should be warned. These are the sanguine promise-makers. They may be divided into two sorts. They are those who, from a foolish custom of fawning upon all those they come in company with, have acquired a habit of promising to do great kindnesses, which they have no thought of performing. The others are a sort of warm people, who while they are lavishing away their promises, have really some thought of doing what they engage for; but afterwards, when the time of performance comes, the sanguine fit being gone off, the trouble appears in another light; the promiser cools, and the expectant is deceived, and perhaps injured by the disappointment.

Criticism of an Expert.—A sailor once had a friend who read Shakespear's plays for him. He criticised them all pretty freely, but when he came to the passage in the Midsummer Night's Dream in which the mermaid is made to ride upon the dolphin's back, he pronounced it an unqualified humbug; "for," said he, "a dolphin's back is as sharp as a razor, and no mermaid could possibly ride the beast unless she had first saddled him."

A Buenos Ayres paper announces that in the Province of San Juan, which is situated almost at the foot of the Cordilleras, gold has been discovered in almost incredible quantities. The full particulars of this discovery are kept hushed up and kept from the masses for obvious reasons, but authentic intelligence has been received by some English residents of Buenos Ayres which leave no doubt that the treasures of the Andes are at last about to become known to the world. Within two days after the discovery was made over four hundred ounces of gold were secured by the gold miners, and [illegible] have been received from this [illegible].

Seward and [illegible].—[illegible] correspondent, the San Francisco Monitor makes a statement calculated, if not intended, to convey the idea that Mr. Seward while U. S. Senator, voted in favor of a dissolution of the Union. In this respect the Monitor is wrong. Petitions for the dissolution of the Union were presented to the Senate, and the question came up as to whether they should be received or rejected by that body. Seward, Hale and Chase voted for the reception of the petitions, but not in favor of the prayer of the petitioners. They voted as they did on the ground that every citizen had the right of petition.—Sac. Rec.

A Young Apache in Wilmington.—The Wilmington (Los Angeles county, Cal.) Journal of the 21st January says:

[illegible] Sergeant [illegible] has a young Apache boy about six years old. The young [illegible] … Some time ago the soldiers were traveling through a [illegible] on a moonlight night, and espied an Indian form a short distance ahead, when they immediately fired. At the same moment the object raised its hand and exclaimed, "Me [illegible]"—but it was too late. On going to the spot, they found, not a buck Indian, but a dead Apache woman, with her little daughter a corpse, and her little boy alive and unhurt. The woman was evidently just preparing a bed when [illegible]. The soldiers took away the boy, and now he goes by the name of Ned—or as the sergeant says, "Edward." Gen. Carleton has prohibited the shooting of Apache women. Late the other night we noticed a small dark object come out of this house and disappear in the gloom, and thought it must be some dwarf, for surely so small a child could not think of going out by itself in such a dark night, without guide or protector. But it could, though. It was Apache Edward, walking stealthily through the [illegible] with the [illegible] of an old warrior. Was it instinct or education that gave the child such confidence? Probably both.

Some time ago a citizen of Los Angeles captured one of these little fellows, who went along good naturedly till an opportunity occurred in the night, when he ran away, and confounded his pursuers by wading out his tracks while crossing a dry creek—going backward on his hands and feet, and obliterating the marks as he went.

Remarkable Success in Guns.—Mr. Ames, of Connecticut, who after many rebuffs from the Ordnance Bureau, at length succeeded in getting from the higher power a contract for fifteen wrought iron 7 inch guns, has had one of them tested with charges of twenty-five pounds of quick-burning powder, increased after a few trials to thirty pounds, seven hundred times. No perceptible impression was made on the gun. The strain endured by this gun is more than four times as great as that which was ventured on the 20 inch gun which is called a great triumph. We need not say that the velocity and effect of the shot are in proportion to the power applied. With the Hotchkiss projectile, and thirty-five degrees elevation, a range of seven miles was reached.

Proclamation.

State of Oregon, Executive Department,
January 12th, 1865.

Whereas I have received a requisition from Major General Irwin McDowell, commanding the Department of the Pacific, acting under the authority of the War Department, for a regiment of Cavalry for another term of years, by retaining in whole or in part the Regimental and Company organization of the present Oregon Regiment of Cavalry, to aid in the enforcement of the laws, to suppress insurrection and invasion and to chastise hostile Indians in this Military District.

Now, therefore, I, Addison C. Gibbs, Governor of the State of Oregon and Commander-in-Chief of the Militia thereof, do hereby call upon the citizens of this State to organize themselves into Companies sufficient to fill the foregoing requisition.

[L.S.] In Witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the State of Oregon to be affixed. Done at Salem this 12th day of January, A. D. 1865.

ADDISON C. GIBBS,
Governor of Oregon.

Attest: Samuel E. May,
Secretary of State.

Plan of Recruiting.

The Regiment will retain the name of the 1st Cavalry Oregon Volunteers. It will consist of twelve Companies—seven Companies of the old Regiment will be recruited to the minimum strength required. Five new Companies remain to be raised. A Recruiting Officer for each new Company will be appointed.

Commissions will be issued by the Governor to Recruiting Officers, conditioned that they shall recruit their respective Companies in the District to which they are assigned, and be ready to be mustered into the service within a time hereafter to be named. All the Officers for the new Companies and the First and Second Lieutenants for the old ones will be appointed as soon as the Companies are filled.

As soon as it is practicable the State will be divided into Districts, according to the number of persons in each liable to do military duty and to the number of troops heretofore furnished. When such District has furnished its quota of men there will be no draft in the same under this call.

The State has provided by law for the payment of a bounty of $150 in State [illegible] in gold to each Volunteer mustered into the service for three years, in addition to the bounties authorized to be paid by the United States.

Under Act of Congress, those who enlist for one year are entitled to a bounty from the General Government of one hundred dollars; for two years, two hundred dollars, and for three years, three hundred dollars, one-third of which is payable at the time of muster-in. Neither drafted men nor substitutes—furnished either before or after the draft—are entitled to bounty.

The wages of a Private soldier are $16 a month, besides clothing, equipments, rations, medicines and medical attendance, and other allowances furnished by the United States.

The pay per month is, First Sergeants of Cavalry, $24; Sergeants, $20; Corporals $18; Buglers, $16. A Company can be mustered in on reaching the minimum of 82 enlisted men.

All the Horses for enlisted men will be furnished by the Government.

Appreciating highly the patriotic action of the people in responding to the previous call for an Infantry Regiment, it is hoped that equal alacrity will be exhibited in raising a Regiment of Cavalry.

LEFFEL'S AMERICAN

DOUBLE TURBINE WATER WHEEL!

LEFFEL'S AMERICAN TURBINE HAS many advantages over all other Wheels, both Turbines and Overshot.

It has competed successfully with every variety of Wheel, and has always proved itself victorious.

This Wheel has been in use nearly Three Years in the States and HAS NEVER MADE A FAILURE.

It is CHEAPER than an Overshot, MORE DURABLE, and will YIELD A HIGHER PER CENT. OF POWER from the same quantity of water. We have introduced [illegible] five on this coast. They are all in operation yet, but [illegible] been a few days. The following testimonial is from an old and experienced Mill-wright, well known in this State:

Westport, Clatsop Co., Oregon,
Nov. 29th, 1864.

Messrs. Leffel & Myers—Dear Sirs: We have plenty of water now, and your DOUBLE TURBINE is in successful operation. We are satisfied that your Wheel is fully equal if not superior to the Overshot. With the same water that the Overshot used we can do more work with the Turbine than with the Overshot. I have tried many Wheels which were claimed to be superior to an Overshot but yours is the first I have found. Hence we do not hesitate to recommend the American Double Turbine as the most efficient economizer of water in our knowledge.

THE OREGONIAN,

A

FIRST-CLASS POLITICAL AND FAMILY NEWSPAPER,

Published Daily and Weekly.

PROSPECTUS FOR THE FIFTEENTH VOLUME,
Commencing November 19th, 1864.

The character of the OREGONIAN, which has been regularly issued for Fourteen years (being the oldest newspaper in the State), has become so well established and is so favorably known, that we hardly deem it necessary at the present time to announce that it will continue a FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT FAMILY AND POLITICAL NEWSPAPER. We shall spare no efforts towards its further improvement and progress, and to make the OREGONIAN not only a complete compendium of current news and passing events, but also a pleasant fireside companion and a faithful commercial guide. It will contain full reports of important naval, military and political movements, with Stories, Sketches, Poetry, Editorials upon current topics, Correspondence from different sources and Telegraphic Dispatches up to the time of going to press.

It is the only paper in Oregon that gives full and regular Telegraphic Reports, and that receives these Reports in full, expressly for its own columns.

The size of the WEEKLY is much enlarged with the commencement of the present volume, but the price remains still at the low sum of THREE DOLLARS per annum, hoping thereby to secure an increase of circulation as the reward of our enterprise.

Our columns will be devoted to the advocacy of Union principles, and we hope by a cordial and courteous discussion of political principles to command readers of every political complexion and the respect of all our readers.

We shall specially endeavor to conserve the interests and secure the patronage of the large and important mining regions of Idaho, Washington and our own State, and shall in all matters of interest relating thereto, and do justice to their growth and importance, and shall endeavor to receive interesting and reliable correspondence from that section of country.

Critical Notices of the Press.

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore).

The most popular Monthly in the world.—New York Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellence of HARPER'S MAGAZINE—a journal with a monthly circulation of 17,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People, and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each Number contains fully 144 pages of reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good wood-cuts; and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature.—TRUBNER'S Guide to American Literature, London.

The volumes bound constitute of themselves a library of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the same compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.
